24th July, 2016.

Event Report – Townhall

The opening event of the CSI Council was a great success with huge number of crowd attending the event and participating enthusiastically in the informal session with the mind boggling seniors. The curiosity was addressed and students felt motivated.

The event commenced its way through a short session of questions put upto Divya Biyani (Y13) and Saloni Goyal (Y13). They had a wide list of academic achievements.

Divya boss emphasized on a good kick start of anything would itself provide immense confidence to keep a person going smoothly whereas Saloni boss stated that a well maintained routine and cleared set of concepts will always get one to perform well. They elaborated how their interns were an eye-opening moment for them and how they are going to miss the college life, which are the best days one could ever have.

Following them the great inexplicable mind with all-rounder capabilities, Kuldeep Grewal (Y13) was called up on stage. He described how he has an unbreakable attachment to both basketball and coding and they indeed form core part of his life. He had contributed in several open source projects. Several fun-elements were also put in, by asking him out of zone questions. He stated himself as a paragon that college has to be endured with developing skills, may it be of any aspect.

The ex-chairperson, a contemporary poet, Pushkal Agarwal (Y13) was invited on stage. His words gave a perfect description of his leadership qualities and intelligence. Students enjoyed his school time dance video which was also shown during the session. He set forward an example of how one has to maintain a strong bond with the faculty in order to achieve and explore new things around. He gave an inspiration to think out of box.

Sagar Chand Agarwal (Y13) had an unending list of achievements. He had been showcasing astounding capabilities ever since his college tenure had begun. He elaborated his journey through Google Summer of Code and further elaborated his way through Google intern. He described how life isn't an easy path and difficult challenges faced by him during this entire time. References and collaboration was what kept him going and let him reach the level he is at present. He got nostalgic during this talk and said that nothing's ever some mirabilia. He described how supporting the faculty had been when he needed help

With a token of respect and love, the mementos were handed over to each of them. They finally said that let this journey continue and reach great heights and ended with a joyful mood. Townhall made an ignition start in each mind which desires to achieve the great in their lives.
